LAWLESS BRITAIN

Courtesy of the Tories

THEY TOLD US THAT second generation coloured immigrants would simply be Britons who happened to have black or brown skins. They told us that once we had got over our immediate feelings of resentment everything would be wonderful and our culture would be enriched. Well if you live in Blackburn then you know what a load of rubbish our politicians have been talking since the late 1950's.

On 22nd July war broke out between Pakistani and Indian mobs on the streets of Britain. Battles were fought for five nights with more than 3,000 (yes three thousand) people involved in one confrontation. The police recovered more than 50 petrol bombs in the Whalley Range area of the town and countless more were used in the violence. The two sides called in reinforcements from as far away as Halifax and in repeated clashes, knives and clubs were wielded and hundreds of Police were needed as the violence escalated night after night before finally dying out after five nights of terror.

In Bristol and other cities there have been explosions of violence when police have moved in against drug dealers. In Oxford there has been violence on specific estates where teenagers have been 'joy-riding' and where drug dealing is rife.

Crime figures have increased almost every year since the Tories came to power thirteen years ago; yet they have no ideas for solving what is becoming a nightmare for many British people. The Labour Party are no better, they are too busy worrying about the rights and comfort of convicted criminals.

The National Front would cut the levels of crime 'at a stroke' by . . .

* Educating our children to uphold the law
* Increasing crime prevention methods
* Eliminate drug trafficking by bringing back the death penalty for large-scale pushers.
* Eliminating no-go areas in Britain.
* Ensuring that the Police are part of the community they serve.

THUGS RULE IN BRIGHTON

SCUM OF THE EARTH: Just look at this assortment of creatures. They are the storm troopers of the Labour Party in Brighton determined to stop free speech.

IT WAS a dark day for democracy in Brighton at the beginning of August when threats and intimidation by the Brighton Labour Party resulted in the cancelling of the monthly meeting of the Brighton Branch of the National Front.

Since June 1986 the Devonshire Hotel in St Aubyns has been the venue where the local NF has held their meetings. Despite continual threats of violence and even a bomb threat the management of the hotel honoured every booking by the Front refusing to be intimidated. But this year's campaign by Brighton Labour Party was just the straw that broke the camels back.

For the last two months the hotel and other houses in the road had been the focal point of a campaign of dis-information about the NF as well as residents being warned that there would be violent scenes if the NF were allow to hold meetings. The campaign culminated in a march by 200 Labour Party bootboys through St Aubyns and a picket at the Devonshire Hotel.

But while Labour Party thugs swigged lager on Brighton seafront and boasted of their 'victory', NF activists were busy in nearby Worthing, Hove and Eastbourne.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE VOICE of the people was well and truly heard in the French town of Hautmont near the Belgium border.

Worried by the influx of immigrants to the area the local people held a referendum to instruct the council to prevent anymore Africans settling in their town. A massive 87% of voters backed a call to halt the immigration, but the referendum was branded illegal by the Government.

Capital Punishment

ON 10TH JULY 1992 Tony Teare was found guilty in a British court of slitting the throat of Corrine Bentley, 22, and leaving her to bleed to death. The judge, Deemster Henry Callow then read out the sentence: "You will be hanged by the neck until you are dead and your body buried in the jail or some other place as shall be decided by the court".

This all took place on the Isle of Man. But now the bad news, the sentence is bound to be commuted to life imprisonment by the Home Office and legislation is coming before the island's parliament to abolish the death penalty.

It is for exactly this type of callous crime that the National Front would restore the death penalty.

Butchered

93,000 UNBORN babies were murdered on the NHS in England and Wales in 1990, nearly 4,000 more deaths than the previous year and an horrific 20,000 more killings than in 1981.

A National Front government would put a halt immediately to the butchering of Britain's unborn babies.

EXPOSING BRENT'S TORIES

"AFRICANS ARE the superior race."

"If I tell you I am superior, I am superior"

"I admire Idi Amin because he stood up for the rights of his country. If killing was done so be it".

These are the sayings of a Conservative Councillor in the London Borough of Brent, she is Nkechi Amalu-Johnson who has been converted from socialism to conservatism and to the Islamic religion.

She echoes the views of the black supremacist Nation of Islam led by Louis Farrakhan, which is increasingly active in North London. One local market trader said that their followers had been injecting poison into the local people: "They call white women slags and shouted that Jews should be killed on the spot".

Another Conservative Councillor who also echoes these views is Poline Nyaga who is, unbelievably, the Chairman of the Environmental Services Committee of Brent Council. Nkechi Amalu-Johnson calls herself "Madam Chairman of Brent" - she is currently facing a police investigation for fraud. All in all she seems to have all the qualifications for being the ideal Conservative, perhaps John Major should invite her to join his Cabinet.

CONGESTION SUFFOCATES MANCHESTER

FREIGHT OFF THE ROADS: The answer to Manchester's air problem.

MANCHESTER IS rapidly getting the reputation of being Britain's most polluted city.

Thousands of people are at risk from dangerously high levels of air pollution which run a 'coach and horses' through any official European limits.

Samples taken from two sites in the city, Oxford Street and Shude Hill found levels of nitrogen dioxide in the air of over 40 parts per billion.

Manchester's traffic congestion is to blame for the poor air quality with the build up of traffic fumes adding to the ever-present modern menace of urban air pollution.

The National Front would take immediate steps to improve Manchester's air quality by moving much of Britain's freight transport away from the roads on to the railways. The banning of lorry and container transport from the city would go a long way to making the city a much healthier place to live.

CAMPAIGN TO SAVE OUR DOORSTEP MILK DELIVERIES

SAVE OUR PINTA: Presenter Stuart Hall launches the FREEDOM campaign.

A MASSIVE 90% of people questioned in a recent MORI poll believed that Britain's doorstep milk delivery is an essential tradition that must be protected from the bureaucrats of the EEC.

Fresh milk, let alone deliveries of it, is under threat as Brussels dictates that Europe must drink UHT milk. Deliveries to homes have been in decline for the last 15 years, but now a campaign has been launched to reverse the trend. FREEDOM: Friends Electing for Delivery of Milk is aimed at protecting Britain's unique doorstep service and was launched at Coronation Street by TV presenter Stuart Hall.

IRA STEPS UP BOMB CAMPAIGN

THE IRA has again stepped up its terror campaign with large car bombs in Belfast City Centre injuring late night diners and with explosive devices going off in Milton Keynes. With no possible military target in either area, the campaign is aimed directly at ordinary British people in all parts of our island.

There is now no one who is safe from their attacks and no one can now ignore this gang of terrorists. For years the British public on the mainland have been largely complacent about the IRA terror campaign in Northern Ireland, only being spurred into bouts of anger when bombs go off at a militay base or in central London.

Now however they can ignore the bombs no longer and perhaps we can see more vociferous demands for what really needs to be done - the total military destruction of the IRA.

Historic Ruling on Abortion

IN A HISTORIC and very important judgement, Lord Morton, on the 28th July, overturned a previous decision by fellow judge Lord Prosser who had ruled that a baby in the womb was not a "person" in law.

The case in Scotland's Court of Session concerned the death of a baby who had been damaged mentally by the negligence of a hospital while the baby was in the womb. Previously it had been ruled that as an "unborn baby" was not a person - the parents could not sue. But Lord Morton rejected this and the parents, a former Royal Scots corporal and his wife, were awarded damages.

The important general point about this is that it establishes the right to existence of the unborn child. It should therefore follow logically from this that abortion is the murder of the unborn baby and is thus illegal. Whether or not Lord Morton was aware of this consequence of his judgement we do not know, but it would certainly open the door for criminal action against the carrying out of abortions, at least, in Scotland.

Textile Industry Faces Fiasco

MR PETER Booth, national secretary of the textile branch of the Transport and General Workers Union, spoke at the policy conference of the Textile Trade Group held in Southport.

During his address he stated that "on average 100 textile workers lost their jobs for each working day of the year. More than 50,000 workers have been lost to the industry (presumably in the last two or three years) with tens of thousands suffering from extended periods of short-time working and lay-offs".

He called for "a long-term approach to the industry and an end to wholesale redundancies as companies attempt to come to terms with the recession and increased foreign competition".

His solution to the state of the industry was to "invest in the British textile industry as firms concentrated on producing quality goods".

The figures that Mr Booth game are tragic to say the least. He suggested solutions did not address the problems that he had identified.

He infers, hopefully by accident, that Britain does not make quality goods already. On the importation of foreign textiles; does he not believe that his members can produce those goods?

The NF believes that they can and should do so as soon as practically possible. Mr Booth you have nothing to lose by adopting the same stance.

Firms Back Front

by Stephen Ebbs

LANCASHIRE COUNTY Council's latest industrial monitor report carries news of a survey of businessmen whose firms concentrate on exporting. It sought their views on Europe.

Most did not anticipate any major changes to their operation overseas but many were concerned about European competitors penetrating the UK market.

The NF has consistently stated that the UK would lose out as a result of its membership of the Common Market. It now appears that our long held opinion is being adopted by the businessmen and will no doubt be felt by the businesses next year.

The only way for the UK to stop itself from becoming a dumping ground for continental made 'Made in EEC' products is to withdraw its membership of the Common Market and rebuild our manufacturing industries. Only the NF is committed to that end.

LONRHO FUNDS TAMBO MANSION

TINY ROWLAND, head of the large but troubled Lonrho industrial conglomerate, is determined to keep in with the latest crop of African terrorists and dictators. He has been a long time friend of Robert Mugabe, the leader of the one party state of Zimbabwe, a position he won by leading a murderous terrorist campaign in Rhodesia against white farmers and their families.

Rowland has now paid more than £500,000 for a mansion in Johannesburg for Oliver Tambo, the Chairman of the African National Congress, which is trying to impose a similar type of system in South Africa in collaboration with the Communist Party of South Africa. The ANC is clearly embarrassed by this disclosure of regal mansions as they intitially denied it and claimed that the house was paid for by an American entertainer.

One can only hope that Tiny Rowland is actually in one of these countries when there is one of their "peaceful transitions of power" in which case there is a fair chance he won't be seen again.

BRING CIVILIAN LAW IN LINE

AFTER THIRTY-nine Servicemen were dismissed following convictions for homosexual activity in the Armed Forces, the Government have introduced proposals to bring military law in line with civilian law by legalising homosexuality.

The move has angered service chiefs who fiercely oppose the change. They argue it will damage the cohesiveness and fighting effectiveness of units living at close quarters and often under great stress.

The National Front believes that civilian law should be brought into line with military law and that homosexual activity anywhere other than in private should be an offence.

IRA FAILS TO BREAK SPIRIT OF ULSTER

THE GREAT DAY ARRIVES: The Tullycarnet Flute Band makes their way along the Newtownards Road.

Terry Blackham and
Paul Nadin

ONCE AGAIN National Front members made their way to Ulster for this year's 12th July Orange parade. Members from Birmingham, Oxford and South London sold hundreds of copies of The FLAG to the people who were watching the parade in Belfast City Centre.

The NF sales team stayed in East Belfast where accommodation was provided by local loyalists. After getting settled we were shown different places in Ulster which were of historical interest. We were made to feel very welcome by all the people that we met and we were told that we would always be welcome amongst the loyalist people of Belfast.

On the day before the parade we watched the preparation of a band from East Belfast known as the Tullycarnet Flute Band. All the band members showed 100% interest in getting everything right for the next day. The amount of work the organisers had to do was enough to make us all feel tired.

Then there were all the younger locals working hard to build the biggest and best bonfire that they could. The bonfire was at least 25 foot across and at least the same height. In the evening we enjoyed loyalist tunes and songs into the early hours of the morning.

At 7.00am the band formed up and were ready to make their way along the Newtownards Road where they meet up with other bands ready to move into the City Centre. Here they meet up with bands and lodges from all over Ulster. Thousands of people lined the streets to give their bands and lodges a proud send-off. It was in the City centre that we started to sell The FLAG with the help of our friends from East Belfast. Bandsmen, lodge members and members of the public all bought copies of The FLAG which made us really proud to be amongst Britain's most loyal people. We sold papers all day and at times it was hard to keep up with the sales.

During the whole time we spent in Ulster, and for some of us it was our first visit, one couldn't help but to feel that we were amongst some of the best people in the world, people who have to deal with the daily threat of the IRA and yet can still laugh and smile and get on with their lives.

We cannot finish without mentioning some of the people who made our stay such a pleasure, Boyd-do, Tommy, Paul, Denis and many more too numerous to mention, and to all the members of the Tullycarnet Flute Band who represented their area so well.

DAY OF ACTION

by Norman Tomkinson

ON SATURDAY 20th June West Midlands National Front members from Birmingham and Dudley held a day of action in the beautiful city of Worcester.

A paper sale in the city centre was held and over 30 copies of The Flag were sold. 1,000 leaflets were handed out to shoppers and passers-by. Many people spoke to us and said it was about time the NF appeared in Worcester because there had been a growing racial problem in the city and the National Front was the only political party to have sensible solutions to that problem.

After selling for two hours the NF members retired for a lunchtime drink at a hotel on the banks of the River Severn. We could hear the sound of leather against willow coming across the river from the New Road cricket ground where Worcester were playing Yorkshire in the County Championship (which Warwickshire will win).

After a short break NF members proceeded to leaflet a housing estate.

Worcester is a delightful city with an imposing Cathedral, historic buildings and places of interest to visit. W.Midland NF members enjoyed their day of action in the city, surely the most picturesque in Britain, and they look forward to returning there again.

WORCESTER: National Front members handed out 1000 leaflets.

WALSALL: The National Front are always well recieved in Walsall.

SUPPORTING THE SOUTHPORT PARADE

LEFT: Around 75 papers were sold at a Wigan NF Branch day of action in Southport. RIGHT: Stephen Ebbs and John Hamilton at a Wigan National Front Branch Meeting.

ON THE 11th July members and supporters of Wigan National Front joined in the annual Orange Day Parade in Southport.

Having met up in a town centre pub which was packed with Loyalists, copies of The FLAG were soon being sold. As the day's events got under way NF members did a roaring trade with 75 papers sold as well as copies of the NF manifesto Caring for Britain and the ever-popular book An Introduction to the National Front.

The day ended with a small social in the town centre.

FLEETWOOD

Stephen Ebbs was the main speaker at the August meeting of the Wigan Branch of the National Front and gave a talk on the threat to race and nation posed by large scale coloured immigration. Branch Chairman, John Hamilton, gave details of a day of action planned for Fleetwood later in the month.

BIRMINGHAM ARE THE BEST

IT'S ALL change in this table with some branches making real headway as a result of their General Election effort. With the football season now looming and the mid-summer period now passing we can expect to see some more dramatic changes in this table next month.

The one consistent feature has been Birmingham's total domination of the table. Isn't it about time some other branch knocked them of their top spot?

CLOSE AT THE TOP

IT'S GETTING close at the top of the table with Birmingham having the edge at least partly because of their superb General Election effort, but anyone of the top teams could lift the trophy if they put in a last burst of activity.

There are still a number of quite active branches that do not figure in this table as they seem unable to fill in their monthly report sheets, these include North London, Hull, Grimsby, Worthing, Eastbourne etc. It is too late for such branches to make headway this year, but if they got into the habit of sending their report sheets now, they might surprise everybody (even themselves) next year.

The Branch Efficiency Cup will be presented at this year's Annual Conference.

Making Our Mark in Stourbridge

by Norman Tomkinson

ON SATURDAY June 16th fifteen West Midlands NF members from Dudley, Birmingham and Walsall sold over 50 copies of The FLAG and put out hundreds of leaflets in Stourbridge town centre.

Lots of old members spoke to us and promised to attend the next local branch meeting. It appears that the Stourbridge paper-sale has upset a few local Reds who belong to the Labour Party. They have put out a leaflet calling for a ban on the National Front selling in Stourbridge.

Our message is quite clear - we cannot stand you communists but when it comes down to selling papers in Stourbridge we would not object to you trying to sell your leftie papers and as you well know the NF will outsell you, anytime.

CULTURE THREATENED BY AMERICANISATION

MOST National Front members are innately prejudiced against the Americanisation of our country - the deluge of hollywood films and the destruction of our own film industry, the televising of American sports rather than covering home based sports, the cult of 'political correctness' and the American burger chains with their cardboard-tasting junk served up with phoney "Have a nice day" smiles by blacks in disney-type uniforms.

The presence of these pervasive purveyors of Americana destroys the variety of cultures that are found in differing parts of the world. There now seems less reason than ever for Americans to leave their native shores. They go to Thailand, Australia, Germany and Britain - in each case they stay in Hilton Hotels, watch American films on television and munch their favourite 'Big Macs'.

The latest burst of burger imperialism is in the newly opened up territories of Eastern Europe where they're busy wrecking the ambience of the native culture. In Prague a new gaudy red and yellow plastic McDonalds is to open in the middle of the Old town. In Poland they got off to rather a bad start when it turned out that the Polish 'French Fries' were being made of Russian potatoes. In Budapest dozens of local employees were sacked for refusing to abide by the American 'impersonalisation' of fast food.

However it is not just Eastern Europe that is suffering this invasion. In Italy environmentalists are up in arms over the projected opening of a McDonalds restaurant at the Roman ruins of Pompeii. Guido Donatone commented: "This is not the way to respond to the needs of tourism. We fought and we won against the opening of a McDonalds in the Piazza San Ferdinando, in front of San Carlo. I cannot imagine how we can accept a similar disgrace 100 yards from the entrance to the archaeological ruins".

Back in Britain environmentalists have been noticeably silent about the appalling McDonalds situated a matter of yards from the main entrance to the Tower of London - probably Britain's most famous Landmark. With its plastic red and yellow logos you can't miss its glaring lights and burger smell as you make your way into the "Tower Pageant". But, of course, environmentalists in Britain are far more interested in interfering in the affairs of other countries rather than looking after our own island.

Tourists travel from around the world as well as from all parts of the United Kingdom to visit this famous fortress - do they really need to be inflicted with this. Wouldn't a traditional British restaurant be more appropriate, more interesting and certainly more in keeping with the Tower of London.

The way things are going we will soon be told than Ann Boleyn ate a hearty Bic Mac and French Fries before losing her head, while perhaps the little princes were drowned in a King Size Milk Shake . . .

Red Rose Mugged by the Labour Party

THE ROSE first appears as a royal badge of Edward I, who bore it gold, while his brother, Edmund Crouchback, bore it red and so transmitted it to his descendants, the House of Lancaster.

However, the House of York has borne the white rose ever since the title was first created.

The use of badges reached its height during the dynastic wars between the Houses of Lancaster and York - which took their names from rival badges - the Wars of the Roses.

The Wars of the Roses lasted from 1455 to 1485. It started with the Battle of St. Albans on 22nd May 1455, a Yorkist victory and ended with the Battle of Bosworth on 22nd August 1485, a Lancastrian victory, Richard III, the last Yorkist king was defeated and slain.

The victor, Henry Tudor, Earl of Richmond, was to become Henry VII.

After his coronation, he ended the Wars of the Roses by his marriage on 18th January 1486 to Elizabeth of York, the eldest daughter of Edward IV. The red and white roses became united in the Tudor rose.

There have been various forms of the Tudor rose but today, over 500 years later, the royal badge for England is the red and white rose united, slipped and leaved proper - to give it its correct heraldic terminology - it still includes the red rose.

In its long history I can think of no occasion when the red rose was humiliated, but then came the Labour Party who adopted it as an image-softening marketing gimmick. Arrogance beyond belief.

However, with their failure to gain a majority in the House of Commons on the 9th April is it too much to ask that they abandon their maltreatment of the red rose and cease to use it?

There is now hope that on some future St. George's Day the red rose could be worn with pride AND without the stigma of being thought of as a Labour Party sympathiser. That day can never come too soon.

THE STIGMA OF THE ROSE: Association with the Labour Party has meant a drop in popularity for the Red Rose.

UPSETTING THE ASIANS

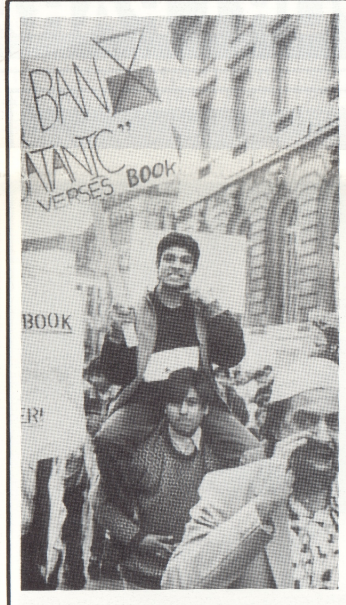
SALMAN RUSHDIE might have a much lower media-profile at present but the Muslim zealots that monitor the British way of life in order to tailor it to meet the needs of Islam are having their work cut out to keep up with all the insults.

Unintentional they may be, but an insult to Allah in whatever form must be stopped on all accounts.

⋆ Matchbox, makers of the popular Monster in My Pocket toys have withdrawn the figure Ganesha after learning he is a widely-worshipped benign Hindu God. Mrs Chitralekha Bolar had complained after finding Ganesha in a box of monsters she bought for her nine year-old son Ashwin.

The Encyclopedia Britannica says the elephant-headed god is considered a remover of obstacles and is the first god invoked at the beginning of worship or a new enterprise. He is usually depicted 'coloured red, pot-bellied, one broken tusk, and with four arms that may hold a noose, goad, pot of rice or sweetmeats.' Ganesha rides on a rat. A Matchbox spokesman said the company was "extremely distressed" to hear it had inadvertantly caused offence.

⋆ Poor old Diana Lewis thought she had found a winner for her shoe shop when the dressy gold shoes in her window proved a great hit with shoppers in Nottingham. Not eveyone goes for decoration on their pumps, but it was still a shock to hear that in Muslim eyes Diana's shoes were guilty of a worse felony than Salman Rushdie's. Her customers were wearing emblazoned across their feet a verse from the Koran.



ASIANS: Continually upset by facets of British life.

Hanif Mohammed Asma, vice-Chairman of the Nottingham Islamic Centre said "It is more serious than Salmon Rushdie. He wrote a book which you carry in your hand. Here the Holy Name goes on the feet". Mrs Lewis didn't know the shoe's scrolled pattern was Arabic or from the Koran. She said that she had no intention of withdrawing the shoes, but Hanif Asmat warned that the city's 12,000 Muslims were outraged and wanted immediate action.

⋆ A pop group called The Orb thought they were really winning friends in the ethnic communities when they incorporated words from the Koran in one of their songs. But this act of ethnic grovelling really back-fired when Muslims were up in arms at their Holy Book being trivialised in such a manner and being associated in a singing, dancing, drinking and smoking situation in a night club. Liaquat Hussain of the Bradford Council of Mosques said "Muslims want to put an end to this madness. The Group must be stopped, they are defiling the Koran." Morons of the month, Trash and Alex of Orb said "Christ, we're no Salman Rushdies - the last thing we wanted to do was to cause offence."

The National Front doesn't wish to offend Muslims either, but their alien religion has no place in our country. They should return to their own country if they are offended by the way we do things in Britain.

TORIES PUT EUROPE BEFORE BRITAIN

THE INTERNATIONAL Monetary Fund released a report on 28th July which predicts that monetary union in Europe would create severe economic problems in many European countries and will keep Britain in recession for another FIVE years.

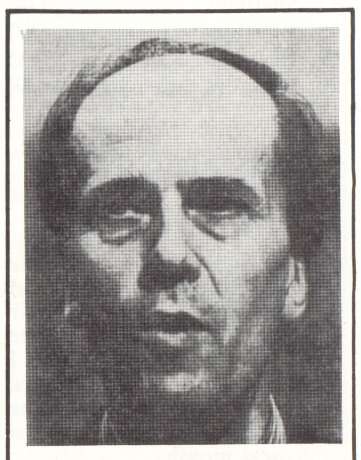
Even the arch-European Jacques Delors admitted that monetary union would depress European economies, he just differs over the extent of this.

On the same day the Confederation of British Industry announced that British industry is in deep recession with no recovery in sight and the small level of optimism that had been generated in the period leading up to the election, has completely evaporated. Howard Davies, the new CBI director-general made the most interesting remark when he accused the government of being powerless in the face of recession.

"Powerless" - yes, exactly, just what we have been saying for a long time. The Conservative government has handed so much power over to Europe and they are so scared they might offend the over-bloated bureaucrats that they have become totally "powerless". The power to regulate interest rates, a key determinant in affecting our economy, was given away when the pound was linked to the Exchange Rate Mechanism; the power to prevent the dumping of foreign goods on our market, which destroys our economy, has been lost when the government agreed to join the Common Market; even the power to determine the rate of V.A.T. is now being lost to the European bureaucracy.

Yet, the Conservatives are powerless, because they have given away the power to do anything about the apalling state of our economy. As a result of this impotence, hundreds of thousands of British people are languishing on the dole, even more are watching all the work that they put into building up their own businesses being brought to nothing by Tory incompetence.

DELORS: Admits problems



TEBBIT: Too little too late

It is this unbelievable conduct that is causing young couples to find themselves homeless when they cannot keep up mortgage payments on the homes which they saved up to buy.

Yet despite this appalling position "that nice Mr Major" with his side-kick Norman Lamont are carrying on down this economically bankrupt road. On 28th July Mr Lamont described his loss of control over V.A.T. rates to the Euro-bureaucrats as "a breakthrough paving the way for the completion of the single market by next January". This is a bit like a man, whose house has been repeatedly broken into, solving the probelm by leaving his front door open so that the thieves don't have to break it to get in.

One Tory has managed to get his brain into gear enough to realise what a load of rubbish their policies really are. Lord Tebbit said the deal was "contrary to 1,000 years of British sovereignty". All very well my lord, but then why did you agree to join the Common Market in the first place, which was the act which started the whole process of losing British sovereignty.

The only small glimmer of comfort that can be seek in this darkening nightmare is that more and more British people are realising that the policies of the three old parties will simply not bring prosperity to Britain. As a result they are looking for a new party with radical economic policies which can rejuvenate our industry and protect the jobs of our people. As a result recruitment to the National Front through the Summer months has been excellent - a small consolation for the misery that is being visited on the British people.

BOSNIA
IS IT BRITAIN TOMORROW

NIGHT AFTER night our TV screens are filled with horrific images of war and slaughter from Sarajevo and the rest of Bosnia. As they were earlier from Croatia, and no doubt will be in the future from other parts of the disintegrating former Yugoslavia. But those bloody pictures on the TV news are more than just shocking sights from far away. They are a lesson written in blood for those to read who will. A lesson that "multi-ethnic" societies don't work. That in the end, if they are not reverted back peacefully by the separation of the mixed peoples in them, they die as multi-ethnic Bosnia is dying. As multi-ethnic Britain will die. In blood and fire and slaughter.

The ethnic groups - Serbs, Croats, Bosnians, Slovenes, Albanians, Vlachs - forced brutally without their approval in 1918 into multi-ethnic "Yugoslavia" have far more in common than those - Britons, West Indians, Pakistanis, Bengalis, Chinese - forced likewise without asking them since 1948 into "multi-ethnic Britain". In "Yugoslavia" the separate peoples all belonged to the same Race, and in most cases to the same Slavic ethnic group, speaking in the case of Serbs and Croats the same language. Although they had proud separate national identities stretching back 1500 years, the peoples of the former Yugoslavia shared similar cultures and ways of life. And, of course, they cannot be readily distinguished by physical appearance. Surely here, where differences of Race and cultural background were insignificant, a "multi-ethnic" society could be made to work? Indeed, many liberals and Marxists thought it was working, and trumpeted multi-ethnic Yugoslavia as a model for the world.

But the truth was that "Yugoslavia" was held together only be crude force. Before the last War, by a fascistic monarchical autocracy under which one of the Yugoslav peoples ruled the rest in a "Serbian Empire". After it, by the still more brutal Marxist tyranny of Marshal Tito. When the State was unable to hold its component peoples together, as during the War and now since the collapse of Communism, the facade of "peaceful co-existence" fell apart in ethnic wars the more ferocious because their participants had been forced together like ferrets in a sack to seethe and hate and build up grudges. Tito's attempt at "integration" by encouraging members of one people to settle in the lands of others has made matters much worse, as Serb enclaves in Croatia, Croat and Serb enclaves in Bosnia and so on break bloodily away from lands themselves in revolt against the wreck of the Yugoslav state. Yugoslavia is a model for the world - a horrific experiment that proves that, even among ethnically very similar peoples, multi-ethnic societies do not work.

OUTNUMBERED

They don't even work there amongst people from the same part of the world. Still less will they work here amongst peoples from every part of the globe. Multi-ethnic Britain is not working now, but the ethnic minorities are still that - minorities, well outnumbered by the native majority, whose Police can, more or less, keep them - crime and the odd riot apart - under control, and society more or less stable. But the increasing populations of the minorities and the declining one of the majority - the result of differing birth rates - will change all that.

By the second quarter of the next century, on present trends, well within the lifetime of many of our readers, the minorities will reach sizes comparable to that of the majority. In the third quarter of that century, the minorities, collectively, will become the majority in Britain. We will be outnumbered in our own country. Well before that, if harsh political decisions are not faced here as they should have been in Yugoslavia, Britain will start to disintegrate in ferocious ethnic strife as Yugoslavia is doing.

When 5% or 10% of the population rise up against the state it is a riot. We have seen those already. We will see more. When 20 or 30% do so it is an insurrection. We will see that too. They can be put down. When a third or more rise up it is civil war. When we see that, Chaos is set free to rule our land. The more so as - just like Yugoslavia - it won't be just Us against Them.

There will be Pakistani Muslim militias taking on Black Rastafarians as well as White British community defence forces, Hong Kong Chinese enclaves being shelled by Indians, while the disintegrating remnants of the State try desperately to keep things together. As ethnic minorities desert from the Army and the police, taking their weapons with them. Until the remains of the Government forces become just another private army. Look at your TV screens: that isn't just Vukova 1991, Sarajevo 1992 you are seeing. It is Bradford 2045, Birmingham 2050.

YOUR TOWN

An electronic crystal ball is showing you rockets and tracer rounds lighting up the night over your town, your children being hit by mortar shells, your streets echoing to the death rattle of the machine gun and the assault rifle. It is a future that will surely come to pass. Unless you do domething to stop it.

Multi-ethnic societies don't work. Yugoslavia is only the latest proof of that. But they don't have to die in blood and bedlam. They can be peacefully wound up. By separating their component peoples, through population movements and repatriation. Harsh at times it may be. Forcing people to leave homes in which they may have been born, even their parents or grandparents born. But nobody dies, nowhere burns, the black hell-hounds of Chaos are kept safely leashed. Compulsory repatriation is a lot more humane than "ethnic cleansing". And it is the only alternative. "Peaceful co-existence", "multi-ethnic life" has been tried before, among peoples with far more in common than those now crammed into our little islands.

If you require its monument, stand in Sarajevo and look around you. And ask the battered, hungry refugees flooding over the Bosnian border without a stick of their possessions, ask those in the camps starving under the guns of hate, whether they would rather have been compulsorily repatriated in a humane, phased way. Many you cannot ask: they are dead. Killed by the "multi-ethnic" myth.

It doesn't have to happen here. Not if we act now. Not if we grasp the nettle before it grows into a thorn-bush to impale us all, Immigrant and indigenous alike. Not if Britain ends the multi-ethnic society before the multi-ethnic society ends Britain. It's up to you. If you want to see your children die in Britain's Bosnian tomorrow, all you need do is nothing. . . .

Nothing to Lose

SUNDAY 12th JULY 1992: Nigel Mansell wins the British Grand Prix, the scenes were terrific, the crowd was enormous and the pride of the British people was there to be seen as the track disappeared under an ocean of Union Jacks.

SUNDAY 19th JULY 1992: The rats of Fleet Street crawl out of their sewer and spew forth their vitriol: "Sports nationalists who can turn nasty", "dangers of national pride", "Little Englandism". The headlines and comments of people who can find nothing in themselves to be proud of and so they attack anyone else who is proud of their ancestry and heritage.

It didn't matter which paper you looked in, whether it was the pseudo-patriotic Sunday Express, or the fawningly liberal Sunday Times, they were all at it. At the end of an article which referred to sports fans as "ninties yobs", "riff-raff", "Essex Men" etc., Martin Jacques in the Sunday Times gave the game away; could such national pride transform itself into something altogether more serious:

> "But among the Mansell supporters were the young males wearing Union Jack shorts or T-shirts and waving their flags. For these young males, often in unskilled jobs or unemployed, such national identification has a particular meaning. In a society where they are no longer clear about their place, in a country that has lost its old identity and is in search of a new one and in a world where globalisation has transformed the meaning of national belonging, the Union Jack and attendant paraphenalia represent a desperate search for a sense of identity and belonging" . . . .
> "Here is a group that feels rootless and displaced, both socially and nationally".

Yes, in a drab, decaying, declining and increasingly unpleasant and violent land the national flag is still a symbol of hope.

When our land and economy is being raped by our politicians and foreign businesses and bureaucrats, then the rise of nationalism as a force of hope becomes increasingly likely. The gutter dwellers of Fleet Street may hate it - the people of Britain having nothing to lose but their misery.

Some Alliance!

THE AMERICANS are very keen on the Anglo-American "alliance" when they want Britain to help them in their wars. Or, as in the Gulf, to fight those wars for them. But when it comes to our war against the IRA it is a different story.

On 6th August, for example, the US authorities set free a convicted IRA gunman, James Smyth, in defiance of a British extradition request. In 1978 Smyth was jailed for 20 years for the attempted murder of a prison officer in Ulster. In 1983 he escaped from the Maze Prison and promptly fled to the USA on a dead man's passport.

This IRA terrorist knew he would be safe there and he was right. The network of IRA supporters that riddles America, reaching into the US Senate and the top judges and police, safe-housed Smyth, got him a job as a house-painter, and provided him with another false passport, on which he visited Britain three times. It was only on charges relating to this false passport that the US authorities could even be persuaded to arrest him at all. Now they have set him free to kill again.

Smyth is the latest in a long line of IRA killers the United States has sheltered from British justice. Hundreds of Britons have died as a result of this American Government policy. Some "ally", some "alliance".

ABORTION ISSUE FORCES CHANGE ON LABOUR OVER ULSTER MEMBERS

KATE HOEY and Nicholas Raynsford, both Labour M.P's, are causing consternation in the Labour Party by the launch of a campaign on the 15th July to allow people in Northern Ireland to join the Labour Party.

This will cause embarrassment to the Labour leadership which has avoided organising in Northern Ireland as this would be seen to be supporting the union of Northern Ireland with Britain. The Labour Party, of course, supports a merged Ireland ruled by Dublin.

SHADES OF OPINION

In order to keep the various shades of opinion within the Labour Party happy they have even gone to the lengths of having two spokesmen on Northern Ireland one of which has always echoed the voice of the left-wing which sympathises with Sinn Fein and the IRA, while the other one at least nominally toes the line of only supporting the hand-over to Dublin with the consent of the people.

Now Hoey and Raynsford are threatening to upset all this. After all how can they keep their left-wing happy with a commitment to a united Ireland when, at the same time, they are organising a British political party in the Province.

One possible motive behind this latest move is that until now the Labour Party has had close links with the predominantly Catholic Social Democratic and Labour Party of Northern Ireland, but the DLP has (as perhaps its only saving grace) strong pro-family and anti-abortion policies which the likes of M/s Hoey and Raynsford so dislike.

One other change which has provoked this is the decision of the Labour Party to allow people from overseas to join - a decision which was taken as a desperate attempt to improve their catastrophic financial position.

KEN & GERRY: The more familiar face of the Labour Party's stance on Northern Ireland.

The Roots of the British

Who are we as a people? Where did the British come from? Are we a nation of immigrants as some multi-culturalists would argue?

GET THE NATIONAL FRONT VIEWPOINT KNOWN

RACE TABOO

Issue should be discussed

I REFER to the article 'Race attack front line' (June 12).

On racial attacks, Mr Bennett comments: "We have no idea what reasons for the increase are but it could be linked to the promotion of right wing organisations in general."

I have been the Blackburn organiser of the National Front, presumably one of the right wing organisations referred to, for the last three years.

At no time during those years have any of our members been involved in racial attacks in Blackburn or elsewhere in Lancashire.

The CRE believes that the strengthening of the race relations laws is the solution — just like the present laws were seen to be. And when the suggested new laws inevitably fail, what then? More laws?

Consulted

The NF does not condone racial attacks but sees them as the inevitable result of the actions of past and present governments. Perhaps Mr Bennett and friends would like to consider the following:

- The general public have never been consulted on the subject of immigration;
- Any individual who openly expresses opposition to immigration is immediately and incorrectly branded, by the media, politicians and the like as a "Nazi" or "Fascist" or whatever. But the valid point that the individual raises goes unanswered, even when supporting evidence is supplied.

Is it any wonder that the majority of the indigenous population has nothing but contempt for the CRE?

Regrettably, some individuals launch cowardly and futile attacks on immigrants but the immigrants are only the innocent pawns.

Others, like the NF, press politicians to answer the genuine fears raised by the people they are meant to represent.

Mr Bennett, the reasons for the problems of race lies in the minds of you and your ilk.

BRITAIN: Jap Gateway to Europe

THE MUCH heralded Japanese invasion of the North-East's industrial plain is already falling far short of all the early expectations.

The recent report from former Nissan workers that the company is cultivating a clone worker who doesn't argue and does as he is told has been followed by the news that Toyota are now importing components for their new Deeside factory from Japan rather than using British-made parts.

Toyota say they are rejecting the British components because they are too expensive and say that to maintain production of the car in Britain they must import low-cost rubber and plastic for gaskets from Japan.

The National Front believes that the importation of components from Japan for Japanese cars made in Britain is just the start of a process that will end with Japanese workers being brought to Britain. Our country serves just one purpose for Japan and that is to provide a foothold in the European market. When something else turns up that offers them better concessions for building their factories then they will be off like a shot.

What the Japs failed to gain in the 1939-45 war - they have achieved in the peace since.

LESSONS WE COULD LEARN FROM CHINA

IN BRITAIN the police authorities are afraid to arrest drug dealers for fear of provoking ethnic tensions. As a result drugs are freely available on most inner city housing estates.

In stark contrast China has no such qualms. According to the Chinese news agency Xinhua, a total of 277 people had been executed for drug dealing in the first six months of this year in one province alone, the province of Yunan.

A similar programme in Britain would clear this evil from our streets and prevent thousands of young people from ending their lives in this tragic and appalling drugs epidemic.

RITUAL SLAUGHTER: Just a lone voice of opposition

No Singing Allowed Here!

I SEE that Michael Milken, the former financial genius and inventor of the junk bond, has been allowed out of jail just recently in order that he might blow the gaff on his former friend and colleague Alan Rosenthal. Rosenthal is being tried for some slight stock market irregularities and Milken has turned state's evidence against his old buddy in a bid to get his own sentence of ten years in the pokey reduced. That sentence would probably have been greater had he not already been exceedingly co-operative in singing pretty loudly in the prosecution of another former colleague, Ivan Boesky.

No doubt Milken feels somewhat aggrieved at being in jail at all. Why it seems like only yesterday that he was the boy wonder with the Midas touch. He travelled the country giving lectures about his miraculous methods, receiving honourary university degrees and being mobbed by his adoring public. Everyone wanted to shake the hand of the man who was the very embodiment of the American Dream - the man who could make money out of thin air.

Unfortunately, Milken was not only making money out of thin air he was also, among other small indiscretions, rigging the stock market. Of course rigging the stock market is something that happens in Britain too. Here it is sometimes called "the crime without a victim" by indulgent City gents. In America they tend to look less kindly on people who tarnish the American Dream - they actually send them to jail.

In Britain, of course, we are much more enlightened. No City trickster need fear a ten year jail sentence no matter how many millions or billions of pounds are involved.

You will recall that in the case of the great Guinness share rigging scandal, only one, Ernest Saunders, received anything like a real sentence - three years. His ration of porridge was later reduced because it was said he was suffering, I seem to recall, from premature senile dementia, possibly the youngest recorded case in medical history. He has since, apparently, broken more medical records by making a remarkable recovery and is now said to be something in the City. Another defendant, Sir Jack Lyons, did not even stand trial because he was said to be at death's door with cancer. After all this time he is happily still with us and seems set to displace Methuselah in the medical record books.

In another more recent case of share rigging, the trial of two defendants was abandoned because one of them was said to be too ill to continue. No doubt he is feeling better already.

In fact it would be surprising if most of the defendants in such cases did not die of old age before the verdict, so long does it take to bring them to court with such a yawning gap between opening address and verdict.

The notorious Blue Arrow share rigging case took a whole year. Half the defendants were acquitted on the judge's instructions and the four who were convicted by the jury had the verdicts quashed by the Appeal Court.

Clearly Michael Milken made a grave tactical error in practising his trade in America rather than in Britain. If he had known the sort of people who administer the law in this country he might have paraphrased the sentiments of the notorious American tax evader now known worldwide as the Queen of Mean and declared "Only the little people go to jail".

For even if convicted here he would have no need to fear the sort of long prison sentence that might tempt him to sing. Over here, singing is positively discouraged. After all, one never knows what names might crop up in the lyrics, does one?

Alright, Alright, I'm Guilty

I SEE that the great International AIDS Conference has recently been held in Amsterdam. Very appropriate too since that queer-infested, whore-haunted, pox-ridden hell-hole of degeneracy is precisely the sort of place where an AIDS specialist might reasonably expect to find some valuable clues.

For in truth they're all pretty clueless. After all the in-depth investigations, after all the billions spent on laboratory research, after all the breast-beating and agonising by government health agencies, they are not one inch nearer finding a cure or even knowing what causes the disease.

The Ted Budden Column

Ted Budden was a founder member of the National Front. In his column he gives his view of the world.

His comments and observations do not necessarily reflect NF Policy.

They think it may be a virus. They think it may be HIV but they're not sure. They think there may be two or perhaps three strains of HIV but they're not absolutely certain. They think it may be possible to contract AIDS without being HIV positive - they only wish they knew.

If one good thing has come out of this conference it should be the realisation that doctors are not god-like creatures; that they don't know everything and that, in truth, they know very little - many being simply charlatans on the make.

That is why the demand for more and more funding and more and more research (by courtesy of the taxpayer) is probably an invitation to pour money down the drain. In fact most valuable discoveries in medical science have been made by individual or small teams, not by vast laboratories.

RAVAGED

In any event, AIDS may be like many of the plagues that have ravaged populations throughout human history; plague that became endemic but then quite suddenly declined and vanished. Perhaps AIDS is an infinitely variable virus like the so-called common cold for which nobody ever found a cure.

But if the Amsterdam conference added nothing to the sum of human knowledge, it certainly generated a fair amount of heat. One American hysteric even went so far as to insist that poor old ex-President Ronald Reagan was responsible for the AIDS epidemic in disease-ridden America but most of the resentment seemed to be aimed at heterosexuals for obstinately refusing to succumb to AIDS in the way that all the experts had predicted.

In fact all the latest evidence about the disease confirms that AIDS is primarily a disease of homosexuals, junkies, and those unfortunate people who have been contaminated by infected blood. It is pretty certain that the only way that a heterosexual can catch AIDS is through the agency of a promiscuous bi-sexual.

This simple fact has been proved over and over again, and over and over again it is greeted with fury by the AIDS propagandists who denounce and persecute anyone who dares to utter it.

It's all so discriminatory you see and in an age where discrimination of any kind is regarded as a crime worse than murder, the main cause of death among AIDS fanatics seems likely to be apoplexy. After all, it's bad enough when wicked humans discriminate but when diseases do the same thing it is insupportable.

I mean we're all guilty, aren't we? Well no, actually we're not, despite all the propaganda campaigns aimed at convincing us that we are.

You know the sight of all those AIDS loons weeping in helpless frustration is downright heart-rending. It makes me feel quite guilty about not feeling guilty.

Our Great Pants Down Heritage

OH DEAR, oh dear, oh dear! What's this? Another Government minister caught with his pants down? Oh dear, oh dear. What a colossal bore!

I know that it's the silly season for news but the revelation that scowling, morose David Mellor M.P. has followed in the footsteps of starchy, pop-eyed Cecil Parkinson and been caught out indulging his primitive passions with an extra-marital bit on the side leaves me positively cold. I try to imagine such people with their pants down but my mind boggles, totters, and finally gives up the ghost.

MELLOR: Chatterley's Gamekeeper

I suppose that people who think well of the old party politicians (and there may well be one or two) will say, "What a fool. Whatever possessed him?". Well, I think we know what possessed him but apart from that, could it have been the ghostly influence of the near-namesake who was Lady Chatterley's friendly neighbourhood gamekeeper? Could he perhaps have forseen his future role as Minister of Fun and been putting in a bit of advance rehearsal of the fun bit?

Whatever the reason, the spare time activities of Government ministers are about as irrelevant as their official duties.

What is more, the reports in the newspapers of their extramural frolickings are, in a way, downright insulting. For what these odious pressmen seem to be saying is; "Look at these pompous politicians who are always telling us what to do. Why, in reality they're no better than you are".

No better? Why, I've always considered that the good Lord created old party politicians, along with whores and journalists, in order that I might have someone to look down on!

Not that politicians think so. Why Mr Norman "Get on yer bike" Tebbit - I beg his pardon, Lord Tebbit - the world famous trick cyclist and world champion non-executive director, has proposed that the press and the politicians should call a truce in their mutual mud-slinging. Just so. It simply wouldn't do for outiders - i.e. the people - to know too much.

BOGUS MINISTRIES

But in fact David Mellor is not really Minister of Fun at all; that is merely the derisive title bestowed on him by everyone who finds that, among the positive eruption of bogus new ministries, his post as National Heritage Secretary is the particularly asinine effusion of effusive asses.

For, in his new capacity, Mr Mellor is responsible for many wondrous things including two pieces of instant heritage, the National Lottery and the Citizens' Charter. It is rumoured that he has also inherited two posts held formerly by Labour's incredible Arthur Bottomley - Minister of Drought and Minister of Snow. All great Fun.

However, the latest picture of the Minister of Fun does not bring a smile to my poor old withered cheeks. It shows Mr Mellor standing on the steps of the Department of National Heritage being photographed by a milling flea-bitten pack of the paparazzi.

He is guarded by two policemen. One of them is as black as the ace of spades.

When I gaze upon this guardian of our National Heritage, a lot of Fun goes out of my life.

THE HEMEL Hempstead Branch of the National Front would like to remember Tim Hodgson a good comrade who tragically passed away on the 5th July 1990 victim of a brain haemorrhage. Edwina Currie backs Queers

I WROTE to Edwina Currie concerning the lowering of the age of consent for homosexuals and I think you might be interested in her reply.

P. Snell,
'Derby.

Edwina Writes . . .

Thank you for your letter in which you express concern about proposals to lower the age of consent for homosexuality.

As I am sure you realise, we are talking about active discrimination against large numbers of our fellow citizens which I feel is no longer justified. Whatever the causes of homosexuality, it should not be a matter for the law to interfere between consenting adults. Our police surely have better things to do with their time.

I write and speak as a mother of teenagers: I am well aware of the worries you raise. Nevertheless, if we are to have a responsible, tolerant and mature society in the 1990's it is, in my view, time to consider a change."

CHRISTIAN vs MUSLIM: Birmingham's famous old Market Hall clock.

Muslims Rule the Roost in Brum

I AM sure your readers will be as outraged as I am over Birmingham City council's refusal to help fund repairs to the city's ancient Market Hall clock for fear of upsetting the local Muslim community.

The clock which was silenced only by German bombers in 1940, features a sword and scimitar fight between seven feet high figures representing a medieval Crusader and a Saracen.

Councillors says the depiction of the battle between Christians and Muslims is offensive to Asians in Birmingham.

Britain is still, at the moment anyway, a Christian country and if the Muslims don't like it they had better go back to their own lands.

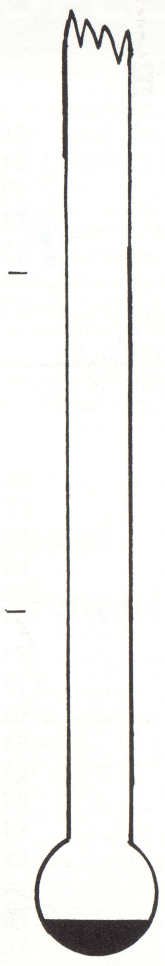
EUROPEAN ELECTION CAMPAIGN FUND



WE HAVE made a steady start to this appeal for the June 1994 European Elections. We have so far decided to contest two constituencies; Birmingham West and London West. We will not be choosing any other seats until we have raised more money so that we can be sure we will actually be able to contest the elections properly.

Please keep the money coming in so that we can go ahead and adopt more constituencies. Remember that each Euro seat is seven times the size of a normal parliamentary seat, so we have already decided to cover a total of 14 normal constituencies and this means that about 700,000 people will hear about the National Front's opposition to surrendering economic and political power to the bureaucrats of Brussels.

DONATIONS SO FAR:
S. Chivers (E.London) £5.00; G. Scamardella (Sussex) £25.00; F. Baker (Sussex) £5.00; A. Marshall (S.London) £5.00; Slough Branch £10.00; D. Malin (W.London) £20.00; D.Cooper (Birmingham) £20.00; Mrs Vant (Birmingham) £2.00; N. Tomkinson (Birmingham) £2.00; Birmingham Branch £89.44.
TOTAL: £179.44.

MOTOR RACING: Britain has 34 years domination of Formula One.

WE ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD!

NIGEL MANSELL and his Williams team are carrying all before them in Grand Prix after Grand Prix in the 1992 Formula One motor racing season. Nor is this a one-off. In the 34 years since 1958, British designed and built cars have taken the Formula One World Championship 25 times. Since 1980 the British Williams and MacLaren teams have won it every year except the Ferrari wins in 1982 and 1983. British motor racing is acknowledged by all as the best in the world. Yet the British motor industry is a joke, owned almost totally by foreign multi-nationals. Why?

Frank Williams, head of the team that consistently puts Nigel Mansell first past the chequered flag, spells it out:

"The state of engineering technology in Britain is, frankly, pathetic. The fact that a company like Rover has no transmission division and has to go to Volkswagen or Honda to get a gearbox in their cars is dreadful".

Why, when we have the World's best car designers and builders? As Frank Williams remarks "In my whole time at Williams I have never been approached by any commercial manufacturing company, even just to see whether the skills we develop within motor racing are applicable to their needs - as I think they very much are".

Foreign motor firms agree - they use their own racing cars, built by their best designers, to try out and test the most radical advanced technology which can later be transferred to production vehicles. Britain's firms don't.

British firms don't even back our world-beating racers with sponsorship money. Nigel Mansell wears about two dozen company logos on his racing overalls. Only two are British, a watchmaker and a speedboat company, both of whose products Mansell himself uses. 90% of the money that backs Nigel Mansell is foreign. As his boss Frank Williams, like Mansell a British patriot to the core, rightly complains "In Great Britain there is a terrible dearth - always has been - of British money for Formula One. It leaves us, a company with very strong British feelings and leanings, having no choice but to look for money and support elsewhere in the World".

MANSELL: "National Weakness".

This waste of our world-beaters is typical of the British Capitalist Establishment. As Nigel Mansell himself puts it: "It's a national weakness. We don't like to think that we are the best in the World at something. We prefer to imagine ourselves as having, perhaps, been great in some distant, golden past".

But while the fuddy-duddies in the boardroom and round the Cabinet table dwell in such a past, the thousands of young White Britons who poured in a sea of Union Flags onto the track at Silverstone to hail Mansell's British Grand Prix victory on that truly British date, the Twelfth of July, show the way to a golden future. When Britain's world-beaters will be unleased once again to beat the world. And not just on a race track!
